

THE RECORDINGS OF GEORGE STAFFORD

An Annotated Tentative Personelo - Discography

STAFFORD, GEORGE, drummer

born: c. 1898, died: New York City, spring 1936

His sister was the vocaliste Mary Stafford. (A 1921 report suggests that Mary Stafford's real name was Annie Burns (from the Ozarks), this could, of course, mean that her brother also adopted the name Stafford for professional reasons.) Early work with Sam Wooding, in Atlantic City, then to New York accompanying Madison Reid. Worked as accompanist for his sister, then joined Charlie Johnson's Band in Atlantic City (c. 1920). Worked regularly with Johnson until shortly before his death, also recorded with Henry Allen, Art Karle, Mezz Mezzrow, Eddie Condon. J. Chilton, Who's Who of Jazz)

Stanley Dance, The World of Duke Ellington, Sonny Greer: "Or Charlie Johnson's band there, at six or seven in the morning, with maybe twenty-five musicians from the bands all over town, white and colored, playing at one time, all the top names in the music business. When the big touring bands came into New York for a short time, they always made the scene even if it was only for half an hour. Drummers like Chick Webb, Kaiser Marshall, Sid Catlett, Stan King, Chauncey Morehouse, and yours truly, not to mention Charlie's own George Stafford – the Powerhouse, we called him – all had the good fortune to play in back of those musicians."

STYLISTICS

They called him "Powerhouse" as noted by Stanley Dance above. But as he felt satisfied to be Charlie Johnson's drummer for 16 years – almost his entire life as a professional drummer, he remained unnoticed by the public all this time. He was not a soloist on drums – as playing solo on drums was absolutely unfamiliar in the 1920/30s – but he was the cited powerhouse behind the Charlie Johnson band until his untimely death in 1936. He seems to have been a modest man being content with the salary he received from the bandleader which was sumptuous in the Johnson band in comparison with other black bands of the time. (Johnson was on very friendly terms with Ed Smalls, proprietor of Smalls' Paradise, one of the most famous and hottest of New York's night-clubs, and home of Charlie Johnson's Paradise Band for more than 10 years.)

STYLE

His style on drums was entirely that of his time, with the bass-drum played four-to-the-bar or on first and third beats per bar, just as required, press-rolls played on the snare-drum conventionally, but enlivened with a lot of rim-shots of both hands, and the use of the up-to-date kinds of cymbals – in the form of the newly developed hand-cymbals from the Zildjian factory or as customary in its period as choked-cymbal (hit by right hand and simultaneously choked by the left hand) and tom-toms.

He also used to play the wood-block using fast triplets for the entire endurance of a chorus, varied with short sequences of eighth after-beats. In the 1930s he also performed on the high-hat, but only in its closed position using single strokes, not using the dotted eighth and sixteenth rhythm as performed by Joe Jones.

This personelo-discography is based on RUST, JAZZ AND RAGTIME RECORDS 1897 - 1942.

Personels are taken from this source, but modified in the light of earlier or subsequent research or on the strength of my own listening, discussed with our listening group or other interested collectors.

- Documented, most certain and aurally absolutely obvious identifications are listed thus: George Stafford
- Probable, generally agreed, but not documented identifications are listed in italics, thus: George Stafford
- Not attributable identifications – although the musician in question might be an otherwise well-known person – are listed thus: unknown
- If a possible identification for an otherwise unknown musician is suggested by the author without the possibility to prove the factual evidence, it is listed thus: (George Stafford)

When feeling certain without a musician's documented presence, I have not refrained from altering Rust's statements without using italics. In any case, my statements are open to discussion and I would appreciate any contribution - pro or contra!

As always in my discographies on this website I have written recording sessions with their headings, dates, titles and names of musicians in italics, whenever I am convinced that the eponymous musician of this discography is not part of the accompanying group of this session! Documented names of musicians if known – in recording ledgers or on record labels – are listed in bold letters.

- All recording sessions from the discographies comprising Ernest Elliott with their documented or assumed personels have been listed. Only discographies or articles in the author's collection have been used.

This discography still is - and will certainly be - a work in progress for a long time, if not eternally. Yet, on the way to a definite discography of all jazz recordings before 1942 - which certainly will never be possible - it is intended to fill some gaps that have not been treated before.

In early 1925 the Johnson band played the NEST CLUB on 169 West 133rd Street. The only two existing photographs of the Johnson band were probably taken as publicity photos for advertising their engagement at this venue (see Driggs, Lewine, 'Black Beauty, White Heat' p. 133. The band photo on the advertising sheet is a different photo to that in the middle of the page). Another source dates these photos as possibly from 1923. The personnel shown on these two photos has been identified by a couple of Harlem musicians in 1978 (see 'Storyville' 75, 77 and 82) with the exception of the trombone player, who nevertheless is Bud Aiken as by comparison with a photo of Snowden's Orchestra in Perry Bradford 'Born with The Blues' p. 102, where Aiken, who also played trumpet, is shown third from left.

According to the testimony of the musicians who identified the band members of the photos, this is the personnel of the first Johnson recording session. (The hitherto generally listed personnel for this session, as in Rust*6, is the Johnson band personnel at the opening of SMALLS' PARADISE in October 1925 as listed in 'Orchestra World' of November 1925 and does thus not apply to this session.)

“Don't Forget You'll Regret” uses the same arrangement as the Henderson band of Oct. 13, 1924, thus probably a stock arrangement, only that Don Redman in the Henderson recording transposed the saxophone section behind the trombone in A2 to a clarinet section.

“Meddlin' With The Blues” might be an arrangement by Charlie Johnson himself or one of his colleagues, as it does not have an identifiable melody as with commercial stock arrangements. It is just a compilation of several different devices: the then fashionable minor strain as in Henderson's “The Gouge of Armour Avenue” and the chordal arpeggios at the end of the tune, which certainly come from a pianist's mind. As this tune has not been recorded by any other band, it certainly is a Johnson original.

It was ‘Bass’ Edwards when with this band who had electric lights fastened on the large bell of his instrument that were switched on and off rhythmically with a foot-pedal while playing!

38117-3 Don't You Leave Me Here	Vic test,	Frog DGF 12

The personnel is established as given with the exception of the first trumpet player. Rust's 'Victor Master Book Vol. 2' gives three cnt/tpt.

After year-long repeated listening I am unable to hear three trumpet/cornet players. Jabbo Smith joined the band most probably in late 1926 as a replacement for Sidney de Paris, who stayed behind in Atlantic City when the band changed over to NYC, as they usually did when the summer season was over. So, de Paris can be disregarded for this session. All solos – except for “Don’t You Leave Me Here” – are by Jabbo Smith. It probably is Thomas Morris soloing in this latter tune. Morris’ presence has been suggested by Richard Rains in ‘Storyville 153’. So, there might be the possibility that the Johnson band was temporarily without a first trumpet, and Morris had been hired as a sub (the trumpet lead in “Birmingham Black Bottom” chorus B1 certainly sounds like Morris). But then the listing in the ‘Victor Master Book’ would have to be wrong. In this respect it has to be borne in mind that it was most uncommon at the time to have three trumpets in a big band. Two were the rule. The great exception was the Henderson band, which had three trumpets since Armstrong had been engaged. From then on, Redman certainly wrote for three trumpets, and after Armstrong’s return to Chicago, writing for two trumpets – plus trombone – certainly would have been a musical relapse.

Or they had a lead trumpet player (the very enigmatic Cliff Brazzington has been listed at the time also with the Ellington band) and Morris was added for some other reason, maybe because he provided the arrangement of “Birmingham Black Bottom”, which looks rather related in structure and general conception to Morris’ own “Ham Gravy” as recorded by Morris’ Hot Babies. In return Morris could have been allowed to solo in the unarranged free ensemble of “Don’t You Leave Me Here”. This then would explain the cited three trumpets/cornets. Yet only two trumpets can be heard in the brass section in chorus A1 of “Paradise Wobble”.

Benny Carter was a member of the Johnson band throughout 1927 (Berger, Berger, Patrick ‘Benny Carter’), joining – for the second time – in late 1926 and staying until February 1928. He allegedly started arranging with Charlie Johnson, and I can well imagine that “Paradise Wobble” might be one of his first recorded – or even authored – arrangements. (The Berger book names his possibly first recorded arrangement as “P.D.Q. Blues” by Fletcher Henderson. This arrangement sounds as though it was written by a white arranger with its whole-tone parts and rhythmic figures and is not related to anything Carter has arranged later, but still includes some later ensemble parts nd harmonic devices which may, yet, be his work.)

Alas, Carter cannot be heard in solo in this session. This is the period the Johnson saxophon section was named “The Three Bens” – Whitted, Carter and Waters. Whitted, by the way, was always responsible for the clarinet solos.

McCarthy ‘Big Band Jazz’ denies Morris’ presence on this session and attributes the plunger solos in “Don’t You Leave Me Here” to Sidney de Paris. Carter’s presence is denied as well.

Richard Rains in ‘Storyville’ 153 is certainly correct in stating that it is Morris here despite “...Jabbo Smith’s assertion when listening to Birmingham Black Bottom, “That’s Ham”. It is believed that Leonard Davis did not join the Johnson Band until some time in 1928.” (Davis left the Arthur Gibbs band to join Johnson in summer 1928.)

“Paradise Wobble” is a heavily arranged 12 bar blues. The arrangement is complex, much more so than the two other titles of this session.

And I suggest this to be one of the earliest arrangements of Benny Carter on record – if not the very earliest. Appropriate and even great soloing by Jabbo Smith and Ben Whitted. (Re Ben Whitted: please, forget almost all nominations of Whitted in former discographies on Clarence Williams! They are completely wrong and out of place and pure unsubstantiated speculation without documented background!) “Birmingham Black Bottom” is akin remarkably in structure and thematic material to Thomas Morris’ “Ham Gravy” and I speculate whether this tune was contributed to this session by Morris himself, if he really is one of the trumpets. On the other hand, this number is a real swinger – very advanced for early 1927 - and perfectly shows the Johnson band abilities.

“Don’t You Leave Me Here” is the very well-known Morton tune, here played unarranged in free ensemble with solo contributions by Monette Moore, the then 18-year-old Jabbo Smith, and Charlie Irvis. Great functional ensemble playing here without turning chaotic.

See my article on the Charlie Johnson band in Names & Numbers 57 and elsewhere on this web-site. The frequently listed enigmatic Cliff Brazzington seems to be a real person and might be the first trumpet player. He is said to have been with the Ellington band in 1926. If so, he seems to be playing on Paradise Wobble only.

Now, here we have the Johnson band in full flight. With the extra attraction of Benny Carter's definitely first (see "Paradise Wobble" above) recorded arrangements, together with his first recorded solo efforts, straight on the way to later highs.

Trumpet soloing is definitely by Jabbo Smith on the first two titles, by another man on the third title, who may be, but is not necessarily Sidney de Paris. Jabbo Smith told Chip Deffaa ('Voices of The Jazz Age') that he left the band because of being accused of bad behaviour, and that de Paris was his successor. This would mean, that Smith would not have been in the band together with de Paris. So, the first trumpet player's identity has to be questioned, just as in the session of February 25, 1927.

"You Ain't The One" has a typical Carter reed chorus, this time on clarinets. It is not easy to play and Carter's colleagues struggle along in three-part harmony, Carter playing lead. Very advanced and interesting modulations in the bridges show Carter's early mastership. We hear Edgar Sampson with his violin accompanying Monette Moore's vocal chorus. Sampson has always been listed as saxophonist/violinist in this session, but it has to be kept in mind that he still was a member of Arthur Gibbs' band until summer 1928, when he together with Leonard Davis changed over to the Johnson band. Ben Waters in his book 'The Key to A Jazzy Life' said that the Johnson band sometimes had more than two trumpets, but never more than three saxes. So, I think, that Charlie Johnson added Sampson only as violinist in this session, just for the thrill of it, maybe being impressed by this young man's possibilities. The 'Victor Master Book' has three saxes and a violin. We never hear four reeds at the same time, which in 1928 certainly would have been extremely uncommon.

"Charleston Is The Best Dance After All" again have a Carter reed chorus, this time on saxophones. At the end of this saxophone chorus we hear Charlie Johnson's piano playing into the trumpet break, which seems to be proof of Johnson's carelessness.

"Hot Tempered Blues" is Ben Waters' arrangement with his typical bluesy clarinet writing. Then in chorus A4 we hear a trumpet player, who sounds very much like Thomas Morris in his phrasing in take -1, only that he has much better embouchure than Morris had (G. Bushell said about Thomas Morris: "He had some great ideas, but no lip – it just splattered all over the place"). This man here plays assured, with a controlled vibrato/shake and some funny phrases in take -2 which may yet come from de Paris's art of preaching on his horn (see "The Boy In The Boat" of the next session). Beautiful bluesy four-string violin by Sampson and phantastic free collective improvisation by the whole band in the last two choruses, in Gunther Schuller's words: "Here the band swings and rocks in a manner way ahead of its time, especially in the final, climactic improvised chorus. In its all-out abandon, it stops just this side of cacophony, a triumph of the art of ensemble improvisation" (Schuller 'Early Jazz').

Every time the Johnson band was in the studio, the Victor people restricted the band's output to three titles. Even more so, they rejected one of these few titles on this and the last Victor session. Can it be that the band was so undisciplined or unrehearsed? Just think of Victor's attempt to use Eddie Condon to bring a rehearsed Fats Waller band to the studio!

So, the first title had been rejected. For what reason I dare to ask? For me, this session marks the climax of the whole Charlie Johnson output. "The Boy In The Boat" certainly is one of the greatest recordings in classic jazz, "Walk That Thing" is a phantastic early swinger. What then might have been the cause for the failure of "Gettin' Away From Me"? I'd certainly give a lot would somebody offer me a test pressing!

At least we can be certain now of the whole personnel. Leonard Davis had come over from Arthur Gibbs. He had stayed with Gibbs from summer 1927 until summer 1928. Before Gibbs he had played with Edgar Hayes and his Symphonic Harmonists at the Alhambra Theatre from 1926 until summer 1927. Now with Johnson he teamed with Sidney de Paris, one of the real great growl and hot trumpeters, for me much more impressiv than Bubber Miley with the Duke. I can only wonder what the Duke could have made with de Paris in his band. (Did he ever try to hire him?). Where Miley was stuck in his Johnny-Dunn influenced triplets and rather stiff phrasing, de Paris owns a phantastic looseness which enables him really to preach and talk on his trumpet. And then we have Harrison, one of the greatest stylists and giants of classic jazz. What a wealth of brass players!

On saxophones the always reliable Ben Whitted, with Johnson from the early twenties on. He always played the clarinet solos with the band and was responsible for arranging the hits of the day. Reportedly he did arrange Louis Armstrong's solos harmonized for the brass. Young and promising Edgar Sampson had also come over from Arthur Gibbs as steady member of the band. It is interesting to note, that Sampson, as a steady member of the band now, dno longer plays the violin on Johnson band recordings. Ben Waters and the rhythm section were the back-bones of the whole aggregation.

"The Boy In The Boat" has been called "the black diamond of early jazz" somewhere in a book the title of which I am unable to recall. But listen to the row of solos: first Harrison, then de Paris with a call-and-response pattern, first with Whitted, then with Harrison's voice. De Paris here is absolutely equivalent with everything Cootie or Tricky Sam could do. The answering voice is unmistakably Harrison. And then listen to the great but unsung George Stafford using some recent devices for drummers, a choked high-hat in take -1 and a hand-high-hat in take -2. This recording is absolutely phantastic, only that take -2 is very slight degree better to my taste.

The arrangement must be Ben Water's. When the author of this little article played this very title at the Breda Jazz Festival in 1972, the door opened and in walked Benny Waters, immediately shouting into the room "Hey, that's my arrangement!" On the other hand he told pianist Keith Nichols, that the arrangement was Ken Macomber's, who as a young white arranger made the rounds through Harlem trying to sell his arrangements, using his beautiful young wife as bait to gain attention. Stylistically the arrangement is pure Waters! Fats Waller's "Squeeze Me" was originally titled "The Boy In The Boat" just as this "The Boy In The Boat" here was recorded as "The Rock" (STORYVILLE 35). "Walk That Thing" is not as outweighed, but it nevertheless has beautiful soloing by Whitted on clarinet, de Paris on C1 (strain C / verse II) and probably Davis on D1 (Verse III / strain D). But the peak is Harrison's solos in all three takes, take -2 the least perfect. As takes -1 and -3 are very similar in Harrison's solo and take -2 differing mostly in the breaks, the recording order might originally have been take -2, take -1 and take -3. And then St.Clair's majestic tuba breaks in the last chorus, together with Bobby Johnson's banjo breaks and Stafford's drum artifices: phantastic!

This elusive coupling was only issued on a 7" Marathon disc. The small size of the disc resulted in very narrow groove which in turn made the sound of the disc very muddy. The first reissue of these two sides came out on John R.T. Davies' Ristic 28 in 1969, announced as "the greatest sleeper of recent years". As I have been told a whole cardboard box full of this very record, had been discovered in the 1960s in Europe – probably France? – unknown until then. Davies reissued the item and I was lucky enough to get hold of a copy through the very great services of Dick M. Bakker, then of Deventer, The Netherlands. My immediate reaction when listening was, that this band was in many respects akin or even identical with the Charlie Johnson Band. Certainly, there was Jimmy Harrison on trombone, Ben Waters on tenor and George Stafford on drums. I wrote a letter to John R.T. telling him my suggestions, but he wanted to have none of it. The reader may imagine my satisfaction when Rust*4 listed exactly what I had distinguished.

Particulars of the tune "Dusky Stevedore" and its issue and publication can be found in Bruce Bastin 'Never Sell a Copyright', p.44/45.

The personnel for this recording can only be concluded aurally and seems to be as given above. There seem to be two trumpets because of the thickness of sound and because certainly the arrangement required two, but only one can be distinguished clearly. And this player seems to be Leonard Davis with his majestic horn (listen to Eddie's Hot Shots for a sample of his great trumpet playing). He seems to be the only trumpet soloist here. Then we hear unequivocally the one and only Jimmy Harrison on trombone. Ben Whitted might be on first alto, because he was the saxophone leadman with the Johnson band. Presuming this to be the Johnson band the other alto has to be Edgar Sampson, who was with the band from mid 1928 on, just as Leonard Davis was. Although I do not know any Sampson solo that early, I assume that Sampson – as successor to Benny Carter – might have been under his influence. This could be a clue to the alto solo in the second title. The tenor solo in the beginning of the first title certainly sounds like what we have come to know of Ben Waters. Yet, when asked late in his life, Waters denied his presence here. Well, I have become aware of so many errors of memory and judgement of the surviving musicians in my research, that I am inclined not to believe in Waters' memory here. The rhythm section certainly is the one of the Johnson band. Only, that the presence of a piano cannot be stated with certainty. So, can it be the case, that the Johnson band recorded without their leader? For contractual reasons? Or because Charlie Johnson just did not care? Or because he simply was "upstairs" gambling? We do not know, yet the music is fantastic!

"Dusky Stevedore" follows the published arrangement of the Triangle Music Company of Joe Davis, as do the recordings of Thelma Terry and the Mills Hotsy Totsy Gang of the same year. The staff arranger might have been Bob Haring as with the next title. Great soloing by Waters (?), Whitted and Davis.

"Take Your Tomorrow (Give Me Today)" is a stock arrangement definitely by Bob Haring, published by the Triangle Music Company. Very typical Jimmy Harrison solo in chorus A3 and a very Carterish eight bar solo by the second alto player, who in my estimation must be Edgar Sampson (in this relation I would like to ask the reader to listen to Clarence Williams' "Zonky" and "You've Got To Be Modernistic" of December 3, 1929. I think that we have the same musician here.)

And then the fantastic punch and swing of the band! What an aggregation!

Once again, at (*) we have the device of starting a new chorus or bridge – in this case – on the two last bars of the preceding unit, just as before in "Charleston's The Best Dance After All". See there!

This recording session was – in the eyes of its organiser Eddie Condon – the first one of a “racially” mixed band. And – as Eddie told it in his book ‘We Called it Music’ – it initially aroused disapproval and apprehension among Victor officials when Condon proposed his idea to Victor’s A&R man and promoter Ralph Peer. But Peer was an open and liberal person, thus paving the way for future inter-racial recording activities following increasing co-operation and social intercourse among black and white musicians in Harlem. Certainly, some sort of a milestone of humanity.

These sides are a bit dry and academic, perhaps, lacking a sort of “Dixieland” approach by the lack of a clarinet, but they swing like mad. Being a renowned lead-trumpet player in big band circles with very little ad-lib solo possibilities, it is a joy to hear Leonard Davis playing melodies as he pleases. He propels the whole group like nobody’s business, frequently using the high register of his horn.

Mr. “T” almost standing in L. Davis’ shade on these sides, but performing beautifully on trombone on the second title and singing in his “lazy” manner on both titles.

The most over-looked and under-emphasized Happy Caldwell can be heard breaking the ice by playing a solo in chorus 2 of the first title in his very own somewhat erratic and quirky manner. Mezz Mezzrow – the provider of “pot/dope” or “coke” or other kinds of “weeds” for musicians – can be heard in his general style on C-melody-sax in one chorus in the second number.

On piano we hear Joe Sullivan, the pianist of the former ‘Chicagoans’, in his very own and very fascinating solo style, when not not comping behind the soloists. He is supported by Eddie Condon on his swinging and driving banjo.

The greatest surprise, yet, is that we can hear the perhaps most glorified yet least famous drummer of early Swing, George Stafford, mainstay of the Charlie Johnson band through all their career, very clear and distinct here on his entire drum-set and un-muffled by the recording engineers. He plays – always founded by his bass-drum in one/three – press-rolls combined with interesting cross-rhythm rim-shots on his snare-drum, uses his early high-hat cymbals behind Happy Caldwell’s chorus on the first title, and accompanies Sullivan’s piano solos with fast triplets on his woodblock. Fascinating!

All ensemble parts are pencilled down, possibly on the session, giving firm harmonic underground for Leonard Davis’ majestic trumpet-part.

The Johnson band was able to keep a steady personnel over lengthy periods, possibly because of Ed Smalls' generosity and Johnson's happy-go-lucky attitude. Yet Arthur Gibbs' disbanding in summer 1928 opened up the opportunity to engage some young and promising musicians and thus to fill vacancies. There had not been a distinct first trumpet player, such as the Henderson band and the Ellington band had. Here now, with Leonard Davis, a perfect man for this role had been hired. Together with him arrived Edgar Sampson to fill Benny Carter's footsteps. These two musicians seem to have been engaged immediately and had already been recorded in the two preceding sessions of September 1928. Later arrivals from the same Gibbs band – it really is a pity they were not recorded under Gibbs' name (but they were under 'Lem Fowler's Favorites') – were trombonist George Washington to fill Harrison's place and Billy Taylor sen. as replacement for Cyrus St.Clair. Both chairs were not easy to fill, as their earlier inhabitants left very big holes when leaving. And quite naturally the band lost a lot of impetus after the change.

Thus, it is no wonder that these two issued titles leave something to be desired. The band certainly sounds a bit tame here, in spite of the competent playing and soloing by all participants. Whereas every Victor session before produced at least one issued up-tempo tune, this session had only two slow-to-medium titles, the unissued title probably a fast one. A pity! We do not know anything about this title, but it should be added, that there exists a ragtime composition of that very name by C. Luckeith "Lucky" Roberts, recorded as piano roll on QRS in 1923. A quite lively and exciting tune and I wonder if it is the same as recorded here.

"Harlem Drag" is a rather neat blues composition, enlivened by some 16 bar strains. There is some variety in Waters' arrangement and phantastic trumpet lead playing by Len Davis. Whitted is beautiful on clarinet, and I certainly wonder why Harry Dial rated him so poorly in his book 'All This Jazz About Jazz'. With Johnson he played beautiful down-to-earth bluesy clarinet, just the right notes at the right places, just as he did later on on record with Eubie Blake's Orchestra (listen to "St. Louis Blues"!). Very interesting growl playing of an individual kind by George Washington. And again, prominently de Paris on trumpet. Although all earlier discographies list Gus Aiken as trumpet here, he certainly is not on the record nor was he a permanent member of the band.

"Hot Bones And Rice", a Charlie Johnson composition arranged by Waters is a sombre, partly minor, tune basing on extended blues structure, which only shows off its qualities when listened to carefully. Soloists again Whitted, Washington and de Paris. If only they had issued the third title!

These two tunes, together with the two issued titles of September 19, 1928, exhibit what we identify as the Charlie Johnson band sound. Yet it has to be stated that the Charlie Johnson band did not own an individual sound as the Ellington band or the Henderson band. These two last named bands had in Redman – later Benny Carter – and Ellington himself arrangers in their ranks, who were able to create a distinctive characteristic band sound, whereas the Johnson band relied on stock arrangements and arrangements from other sources. Johnson is known to have bought everything available from outside arrangers. Thus, he played two different arrangements of "Rhapsody In Blue" from different people, one of them Benny Carter. Moreover, Ben Whitted was responsible to make fitting arrangements out of every hit tune published and he is known to have harmonized Louis Armstrong's recorded solos for three-part brass for the band.

It certainly was a major event for similarly interested collectors when the discovery of an hitherto unknown test pressing of this session's third recorded title "Mo'lasses" was published on the world-wide-web.

On this title we hear one of the hottest bands in Harlem at the end of the 1920s, very compact here, smoothly swinging their way with an arrangement which certainly is not by Benny Waters, as with most of the other band recordings. Waters' style was more down-to-earth – more rudimentary, in three-part harmony. Here now we hear an arrangement very much pointing forward to Swing-style Jazz. Certain elements of the arrangement – the rhythmic conception, the augmented chords - are very similar to the two titles by Joe Steele's Orchestra, of which we know that their arrangements were the work of a youthful Benny Carter. The young arrangers at that time made the rounds through the dancing-establishments to sell their latest works to the bands and earn some money and reputation. But as Carter had been a long-serving member of the Johnson band – now with Fletcher Henderson's band – he probably also had been an important contributor to the Johnson band book. We know that Johnson bought every arrangement suitable for his band. With Johnson's band Carter had made the earliest recordings of his arrangements (Charleston Is The Best Dance After All and You Ain't The One of January 24, 1928). The rhythmic approach, the chords, the chord-progressions and the four-part harmony force me to the conclusion that this has to be a Benny Carter arrangement.

As soloists we hear a rather smooth – or tame – Benny Waters on tenor, then 6 bars of a very unusual – for its time – saxophone section led by trombone in close four-part harmony (who would have thought of something like that but Benny Carter ?) (B1), then a short clarinet solo by the band's clarinet man Ben Whitted (B2), then unmistakably Sidney de Paris with his peppery hot style for one chorus (A2). In between and just after de Paris we hear two alto breaks by what must be the young Edgar Sampson. The style is very much like what we know of Benny Carter, and certainly Sampson was - as successor to Carter in the Johnson band - influenced by the growing giant Carter. This then supports very unexpectedly my claim in our Clarence Williams series part 3, session 096 in N&N 60, that Sampson might actually be the altoist of Williams' Zonky and You've Got To Be Modernistic! There aren't any further recordings of Sampson that early. The "middle-eight" of the tpt chorus is filled by a beautiful melodious trombone solo by Washington, not in his usual growl manner. He certainly was one of the many sadly overlooked great musicians of the Jazz-Age. In the last chorus (A3), again in the "middle-eight", we hear as soloist the majestic – and clear – Leonard Davis, he too one of the sadly neglected greats.

Furthermore I'd like the reader – and listener – to take notice of Billy Taylor Sr.'s 2 octave tuba-glissando in bar 8 of the last chorus (A3). Marvelous! (He was Duke Ellington's bass player in the late 1930 - another unsung master of Jazz.) And what I love to notice is the very amiably nonchalant inaccuracy of the band playing the music. Quite different from white bands of the time. But I love that! And the band swings like hell!

The title "Mo'lasses" is a tune by the great Harlem pianist C. Luckeith "Lucky" Roberts, one of the fathers of Harlem stride piano. He composed the tune for his show "Go! Go!" in the early 20s. He also recorded this tune on piano-roll QRS 2306 in August 1923, reissued on LP Biograph BLP 1001. Words were by Alex Rogers. The tune has a Chorus in C, starting in minor chords in AABA form 32 bars, then goes – after a bridge – into a very unusual structure of 24 bars AAB in almost immovable harmonies. Then again it goes back to the chorus of the beginning. The Johnson recording (Carter arrange-ment?) follows this structure, yet expanding it harmonically, according to the possibilities of the band and in contempo-raneous style.

It first becomes apparent that the main soloist of this particular recording session is Benny Carter. He solos on alto in the third chorus of 'That's How I Feel Today' (the middle-eight part of the chorus arranged for three saxes in harmony) and in the second chorus of 'Six Or Seven Times' in his very own inimitable way, playing phrases of the melody and connecting them with highly virtuoso and artistic runs. Furthermore, he probably improvises his instrumental phrases in his interplay with Don Redman's vocal in call-and-response fashion in the fourth chorus of 'Six Or Seven Times'. These phrases certainly are ad-lib, if only as a procedure practiced before. But, Carter's main contribution has to be seen in his complete command over the proceedings. All apparently arranged passages are his work, arranging four-part harmonies behind soloists or in ensemble passages. At the date of the recording Benny Carter had just started an engagement at the recently re-opened Alhambra Ballroom (September 13, 1929 - see Storyville 24 cover) which would not last longer than to the end of November. Carter appeared there with his 'Savoy Play Boys' aka the 'Wilberforce Collegians'.

On lead trumpet we certainly hear the vastly neglected and underrated Leonard Davis, one of the great lead-trumpet players of the 1920s, first trumpet player at this time with the famous 'Charlie Johnson Paradise Ten' orchestra at Smalls' Paradise, performing with his majestic sound and his brightness of tone and phrase. He leads the band in all their ensemble parts.

- The trumpet soloist in the first chorus of 'That's How I Feel Today' must then be Rex Stewart as listed ubiquitously. But is it really him? Close listening reveals that nowhere on these sides a second trumpeter can be discerned with certainty, playing along with the first trumpet. In all ensemble passages only one trumpet seems to be present, and evaluating the ad-lib trumpet solo on the first title it becomes apparent that this player very probably is Davis as well. Compare his tone, attack and his very strong final vibrato to Davis' recordings with the Eddie Condon Hot Shots session of February 8, 1929. His vibrato is distinctly different to Rex Stewart's. He may also be identified by his somewhat academic approach to trumpet playing, using rather simple rhythm, clear diction and strong tone - what is crucial for first-part playing in a big band - and little use of blue-notes or dirty tones. It should be added here that the Fletcher Henderson band were on a Western tour for the whole of September of this year, starting in August and not returning to New York before the end of October 1929 (Hendersonia, p. 234). As Stewart definitely was part of the Henderson trumpet section at this time there certainly is no reason to assume his presence at this particular session. The booklet author for the Media 7 CD, by the way, names Davis as trumpet soloist, but still keeps Rex Stewart in the personnel.

- With the Henderson band on tour, Carter could not hire Jimmy Harrison as trombonist and engaged the number two trombonist in Harlem at this time, J.C. Higginbotham. His tone, vibrato, attack and style are almost unmistakable, complete with upward jumps and typical jumping trill. It seems a bit strange that the JSP CD lists the sober and academic Claude Jones as trombonist.
 - Apart from Carter we certainly have a second (or third) alto saxophonist in Don Redman here. We do not hear him distinctly on alto, but on clarinet playing an obligato to Len Davis' trumpet solo in the first chorus of 'That's How I Feel Today' – a Don Redman co-composition, by the way – and scatteringly copying the phrases Carter plays on alto in the fourth chorus of 'Six Or Seven Times'. Brian Rust in his cover text to the British Parlophone LP (see below) writes about this session: "It was nearly a year before Don Redman reassembled a group that was eventually labelled 'The Chocolate Dandies'. This time he brought young Benny Carter, soon to record with the Cotton Pickers along with the irrepressible Harlem pianist, Fats Waller, then appearing in 'Connie's Hot Chocolates' at the Hudson Theatre on Broadway. With Luis Russell's superb trombonist J.C. Higginbotham, and two cornet – trumpet players from Harlem bands, Rex Stewart and Leonard Davis, this was an impressive front-line, enriched, as if this array was insufficient, by Fletcher Henderson's tenor man, Coleman Hawkins, another McKinney alumnus in the making." Without attempting to compete at the least with Brian Rust's expertise I doubt Redman's responsibility for assembling this group of musicians in New York. He was the leader of McKinney's Cotton Pickers in Detroit from the summer of 1927 on, and might have been in New York, outside of any documented engagements there, to settle a contract with the RCA Victor people which would result in a three-day recording session for McKinney's Cotton Pickers in early November 1929, with a band consisting almost entirely of New York personnel, and not the usual McKinney's men. Benny Carter had just been discovered as a successful band leader on his job at the Alhambra, and might therefore have been contacted by the Okeh people. Alternately, I also think it possible that Redman had been contacted as he had led the first Chocolate Dandies session one year before with the complete McKinney's Cotton Pickers unit hidden behind a pseudonym, handing the responsibility then over to Carter now. As a musician, Redman does not show off here at this session. His only solo performance is copying Carter's alto phrases with his voice in scat-vocal style, very funny and amusing. Also, in 'Six Or Seven Times' he probably is not performing on sax in the introduction and the coda, but on celesta. This catchy melody, which later became famous as a riff in Count Basie's 'One O'Clock Jump', is played by two saxophones only, Carter and the tenor sax player.
 - This, then, leaves us with Coleman Hawkins on tenor sax. But when listening it becomes apparent that there is no tenor sax on these sides outside of the reed section. There definitely is no solo tenor sax anywhere! Can you imagine: Hawkins, the undisputed tenor sax star of the era, at a star-studded session, and not playing any solo spot at all? The booklet to the JSP CD (see below) states: "The pick-up band (well, no band containing Don Redman, Rex Stewart, Benny Carter and Coleman Hawkins can truly be described as 'pick-up') does a great job – with the Hawk charmingly characteristic. Fats contributes as an equal, rather than as leader – a measure, perhaps, of the company he is in." Now, what does this mean? Did this writer really listen? Where does he hear a charmingly characteristic Coleman Hawkins? As I said, the Henderson band was in Kansas City at the Pla-Mor Ballroom, and Hawkins is not documented anywhere to have taken a holiday in New York. The tenor player heard in the ensemble – and only there – must have been a secondary player. Carter might have brought him from his Savoy Play Boys. His name would then be Robert Carroll, of later Don Redman band fame. (Could this have been their first encounter?) Most surprisingly you will not find Hawkins mentioned in the personnel of the Swaggie LP cover text, although this in general is a copy of the Parlophone LP cover text. Did the Swaggie people simply forget to list him, or did they really listen, as I hope? But, on the other hand, you will even find Hawkins listed in name-discographies dedicated to his work as those by Jan Evensmo or Jean-Francois Villetard! And also W.C. Allen mentions this session as including Hawkins. And now, please, listen yourself!
 - There certainly is no reason to attribute any leadership to Fats Waller as noted above, as he was under contract with RCA Victor. But he is the pianist without any doubt. And with gusto and style! He was his own bandleader-soloist at the time.
 - When Redman was in New York, perhaps to arrange the November recording sessions under the McKinney banner, he might have brought Dave Wilborn, McKinney's banjo player, with him, as he was the only original band member of the Cotton Pickers besides Redman himself to participate in these sessions. The banjo player's style on these sides is Wilborn's, with his very straight ahead four-four rhythm without any gimmicks all around, just like on Dec. 05, 1928, when he and Redman were members of Louis Armstrong's Savoy Ballroom Five – the 'Save It, Pretty Mama' session. Charlie Johnson's banjo player Bobby Johnson, as listed in Mr. Berger's Benny Carter biography, does exactly this: play with gimmicks, trills and glissandos. Stylistically, Carter's banjo player from the Savoy Play Boys, Talcott Reeves, might also be considered.
 - As Leonard Davis was from the Charlie Johnson band early record listeners might have assumed that he had brought his band-mate Cyrus St. Clair to this session to play his wonderful and majestic tuba (see Rust and Berger). But: At this time St. Clair was not with Johnson anymore and we know very little about his later whereabouts. But Johnson's current tuba player was Billy Taylor, Sr., who had joined the Johnson band together with Leonard Davis in mid-1928 coming from the Arthur Gibbs band. He may be discerned from St. Clair's playing by his rather coated tone and his attempts to play bass-lines rather than being satisfied with playing the chord notes. And this is what we hear. Furthermore, Billy Taylor is the tuba player on the McKinney's Cotton Pickers sessions of November 1929 for which this Chocolate Dandies session might easily be seen as a test performance.
 - On drums we certainly hear the great and unsung George Stafford, life-long drummer of the Charlie Johnson band. Taking the Eddie Condon's Hot Shots session of 1929 as an example, Stafford is easily recognized as the drummer here. His cymbal sound, his stick-work on the wood-block and on the early high-hat is exactly what I know him for. Only his work with brushes cannot be heard with the Johnson Band.
 - My only unanswered question is: who plays the chimes or celesta in both titles? The most likely candidate for the celesta parts would be the pianist – Waller at this session. As the celesta notes heard are very loud, I assume that the celesta stood close to the microphone. Waller might well have left his chair at the piano to play the celesta in 'Six Or Seven Times', as the piano is inaudible in the introduction and the coda. But Waller cannot be responsible for the celesta notes in the bridge of 'That's How I Feel Today', as he is starting his piano part leading into chorus 4 at this very moment. These notes would then have been played by Redman who seems to have played the celesta on a couple of McKinney's Cotton Pickers sides. He obviously may then also be responsible for the celesta part on 'Six Or Seven Times'!
 - It seems to be appropriate to see this Little Chocolate Dandies session as a test for the McKinney's Cotton Pickers sessions of November 5.-7., just seven weeks later. We have Don Redman and Dave Wilborn there, with the addition of Claude Jones the only McKinney's men participating in the November sessions. Leonard Davis, Billy Taylor and George Stafford of the Charlie Johnson band, in November augmented by Sidney de Paris and Stafford replaced by Kaiser Marshall. The latter together with Joe Smith and Coleman Hawkins from the Henderson band, recently returned to New York. And Benny Carter bringing along Ted McCord on alto from his own band, the Savoy Play Boys. Only Fats Waller appears as his own man, at the first November session probably replaced by Leroy Tibbs. (Re the order of saxophones, see my article on the early Chick Webb band in N&N 68!)

When I first came into contact to John R.T. in 1969, he told me that a number of Johnson radio transcriptions existed, and that he was optimistic about owning them some day. My latest inquiry on this matter happened to be just a couple of months before his untimely death, but he let me know that he still did not have them. The years before I had virtually asked everybody possible about this matter, but nobody knew anything about it. But 'Storyville' 35 positively stated in their Charlie Johnson disco, that "some broadcast items of Charlie Johnson's band from a later period exist, and it is to be hoped that these will appear on record eventually."

Finally, in ca. 2005 I found these – or some of these – items mentioned in Jan Evensmo's 'History of Jazz Tenor Saxophone' Vol. 1. You might imagine my surprise because I had regarded these items as simple rumors without actual value. It still cost me another two years to get hold of them, and I have to tell everybody interested that these items – there are three of them – are in fact very interesting, but that they are audible with great difficulty only because of their surface noise. And most of the listeners might judge it simply not worthwhile to listen. But we can hear a Charlie Johnson band of the day (early 1933) playing in advanced swing style as we know it from Count Basie in the beginning of his band's recording career. Benny Moten had just recorded his last Victor sessions in November 1932. These recordings are generally regarded as the first swing recordings. Now, 3 months later, Charlie Johnson shows us, that his band was perfectly aware of the developments in jazz music, and his band was at the forefront of what was going on.

The first title is a 12-bar blues tune, the first choruses missing, because the eager "recording engineer" switched his apparatus on too late. But we can hear a beautiful muted (?) trumpet chorus, which might come from Frankie Newton stylistically since he was a member of the band for some years. He is followed by a tenor solo with some counter-rhythm triplet phrasing on the sub-dominant part of the chorus. This might easily stem from Chu Berry who was Johnson's tenor man at the time, although I have to admit, that Evensmo prefers to leave this musician unknown, and it simply may be my own wishful thinking. Anyway, this beautiful tune then ends with some powerful riffs and a very advanced coda with extended chords.

"Tiger Rag" is played in a rather conventional arrangement – probably by Ben Whitted – with a competent solo clarinet on strains A and B. Then we have a full chorus of clarinet, followed by a full chorus of very exiting trumpet – probably Henry Red Allen, as he joined the band every evening after finishing his own engagement at another spot. Then a difficult to hear tenor chorus played by – perhaps – Chu Berry. This tenor chorus is divided into two parts, some bars missing in the middle. This because obviously the "recording engineer" had filled his disc with the first tune and the then following first half of "Tiger Rag". He then had to turn over his disc and record the second half of "Tiger Rag" and the following out-tune.

The title ends with a beautiful uncommon last riff chorus.

The last title, again unnamed, sounds very Ellingtonian, but is unknown to me or anybody else I have asked. Most of the sound is overlapped by the radio announcer, who brings the whole broadcast "from Smalls' Paradise" to an end.

Unfortunately, the sound of these acetates is so bad that the drums are un-audible and nothing can be said about Stafford's style of playing at this so important period of jazz development.

Stafford uses brushes all through this whole recording session. I assume that this brushes-sound had been required by the recording officials to receive a more "modern" or "smooth" sound. It is interesting that we do not hear any other device of drums played throughout, no cymbal, no tom-tom and no bass-drum. Stafford plays single-strokes with his right hand mainly at the beginning of the tunes, changing over to double-strokes by the right hand in the development of the tunes. He drives hard and swings beautifully along, with the occasional use of cross-rhythm accents. Together with Horace Henderson, Bernard Addison, and John Kirby, they make a dream rhythm section of the early swing period. This all to underline a phantastic array of super jazz/early swing soloists.

Art Karle's only other appearance on jazz records is with Benny Goodman's band of 1933. The band was compiled for recordings initiated by John Hammond. This band also accompanied Ethel Waters and Billie Holiday on her very first recordings.

On these sides Karle has assembled a band of mixed colour, what in 1936 definitely was a very unusual and daring business. Maybe, Mezz Mezzrow had a strong hand in its execution.

Different from the preceding Henry Red Allen session we hear George Stafford here with a drum-set consisting of bass-drum, snare-drum and high-hat cymbal. And he plays press-rolls on his snare-drum in traditional manner, sustained rolls with stressed 2/4 strokes, these depending on his own feeling, or quarter rolls with occasional cross-rhythm rim-shots. Alternating, he plays his closed high-hat with four-four single strokes.

On this session we can perfectly experience Stafford's great possibilities in driving and leading a band with his rhythmic power. This he did 16 permanent years for the Charlie Johnson band!

A great pity on these sides is that we do hear so very little only from the young pianist, Joe Bushkin who later developed into one of the most elegant and poetical pianists in jazz. But we have here the great individualist of swing trumpet, Frank Newton, with superb trumpet playing dominating musical procedures.

Halas, this is the very last recording session with the presence of George Stafford. As two months before, Mezz Mezzrow, a notorious traditionalist, arranged the date and collected the band personnel. Again, we hear Frank Newton on trumpet with his most personal trumpet style. On tenor sax we have the swinging Bud Freeman, together with the bandleader and organizer (but mainly supplier of 'Muggles'!) Mezz Mezzrow on his very limited clarinet, with a great rhythm section of pianist – one of the "Big-Three" of Harlem Stride-piano – Willie "The Lion" Smith, Fats Waller's guitarist Albert Casey, Duke Ellington's former bassist Wellman Braud of New Orleans origin, and George Stafford on drums.

Stafford plays with brushes or – utmost unobtrusively – with sticks on his snare-drum and alternating on his entirely closed high-hat cymbal. It is surprising to observe that he does not accord rhythmically to "The Lion's" playing when he performs in classic two-fisted 'Harlem-Stride' style. At other instances, when "The Lion" keeps back his left-hand rhythm, the whole business operates much better with Stafford driving the band very sensitively (for instance on the instrumental parts of 'I'se A Muggin').

This latter title was Stuff Smith's somewhat crazy success number 'I'se A Muggin'' with the 'Musical Numbers Game' of his tenure at the famous 'Onyx Club' in Harlem, New York City. And, by the way, Willie "The Lion" Smith does not seem to recall this recording session with the crazy 'Musical Numbers Game' in his memoirs 'Music On My Mind'. Or was it Mezzrow's contribution?
